

Greetings!

Our class enjoyed the story “Flat Stanley” by Jeff Brown. Stanley Lambchop is mashed flat by a falling bulletin board. Stanley finds out that being flat has its advantages, especially when his parents send him off in an envelope to visit friends in California!

For a classroom project, students have made their own “Flat Stanley” to e-mail to others. We hope you will treat this “Flat” student like a guest, jot down some things he or she learned and/or saw while visiting you, then e-mail the student back in a few days.

This will provide an opportunity for our students to gain practice with their basic word processing skills and also practice in letter writing. This will be one of their first meaningful opportunities to use a word processor as a communication tool. It will also motivate them to produce their best work! They will be eagerly looking forward to your response.

Thank you,
